AUTHOR OF THE MONTH PHILLIP GWYNNE

THE BUILD UP

TP 331pp $33.00

The first adult novel from the highly acclaimed Australian author of Deadly, Unna?

For Detective Dusty Buchanon, a female cop in the very male world of the Northern Territory Police Force, it always pays to expect the unexpected. When the body of a young Thai prostitute is found in a billabong near a camp of disaffected Vietnam veterans, Dusty knows this is what she's been looking for -a spectacular case to get her back on top after the debacle of an infamous British backpacker murder trial that almost destroyed her career.

But when the body disappears and her colleagues turn against her, Dusty gets help from an unlikely source: a handsome German birdwatcher holidaying in the Northern Territory, who just happens to be a cop. And soon the case becomes much more than just another step on her career ladder.

Set against Darwin's hustling, exotic melting pot of people and cultures, Phillip Gwynne has written a page-turning crime thriller with an unforgettable hero and a bit of sex and dark humour thrown in. I thoroughly enjoyed this and eagerly look forward to the next outing for Dusty.

ABBEY'S TURNS 40: A Continuing Retrospective: Part 8

One of the most pleasing changes in the crime scene over the past forty years has been the phenomenal growth of Australian crime fiction. There always has been Australian authored crime but little of it was published in Australia. Jon Cleary started his Scobie Malone series in 1966 and Charlotte Jay won the first Edgar Award for Beat Not the Bones edging out Raymond Chandler (both originally published in the UK). There was also Peter Carter Brown and Larry Kent which were pulp fiction released by Horwitz with paper covers (which I must say I devoured – part of my misspent youth, no doubt). However the real rebirth came with the publication of The Dying Trade by Peter Corris, published by McGraw Hill (an educational publisher) in hardback in 1980. Australian publishers started to take notice of Australian crime writers and the eighties and nineties saw a blossoming of writers including Jessica Rowe and Marele Day amongst others. Some authors came and went as the publishers tried to find the most saleable styles and genres. One that I regretted passing was Martin Long with his historical series set in 19th century Sydney – only three were published, but they were absolutely charming. Australian crime writing today is in a very healthy state with new authors like Leah Giarratano, Katherine Howell and Kathryn Fox joining more established authors like Kerry Greenwood, Peter Corris, Barry Maitland, Shane Maloney and Peter Temple to keep the genre at the forefront of the public mind. There are an awful lot of Australian crime authors but space does not permit me to name them all.

512pp Tp $24.95

When American socialite Barbara Baekeland was stabbed to death in her apartment, her son was arrested for the crime. Alternately neglected and smothered by his parents, he was finally driven to destroy the whole family in a violent chain of events. Due Aug (American)

Derek WHITICKER

Derek Percy, Australian Psycho

Percy, 58, is currently serving in Victoria's Port Phillip Prison and is considered one of Australia's most violent sex criminals. He was ordered to remain in custody indefinitely after he was found unfit to plead, on the grounds of insanity, to the murder of 12-year-old Yvonne Tuohy at Warneet beach, southwest of Melbourne, in 1969. Due Aug (Australian)

Cindy WOCKNER & Madonna KING

Bali Nine: The Untold Story

400pp Pb $25.00

In April 2005, nine young Australians were arrested in Bali on charges of drug trafficking. Journalists Wockner and King have pieced together the whole story, from arrest to jail to the harrowing final journey. With the co-operation of several family members of the Bali nine, this is a compelling, clear-eyed portrait of an unforgettable chapter in Australia's history. Due Aug (Australian)

Peter WOOLF

The Damage Done

352pp Tp $34.95 Peter Woolf is 50 and has spent half his life in and out of jail. A heroin addict at 14 he went on to become a notorious career criminal. Yet today Peter is clean and has not re-offended since a life-changing meeting in 2002. This is a searingly honest and gritty portrayal of a man ensconced in a world of violence and depravity who, against the odds, managed to turn his life around. Due Aug (English)
